WHERE THE RIVER MEETS THE SKY Jim Quartieri Travel through India in times long past and accompany two seekers on their spiritual journey. So many seek and so few find the answers to our ancientness. As you read this book you will become encapsulated in the beauty of nature, seen through the eyes of two who have been mesmerized by its wisdom. This writing is a creation from many years spent in the forest; learn its secrets and subtle simplicity. Take the journey that very few are only now beginning to look for. India's varied landscapes are mentioned in depth, with appropriately placed poems throughout. Two ascetics travel throughout India teaching the art of meditation, living a spiritual life in the mundane world, and commitment to the goal of enlightenment. The processes that the travelers experience allow them to unfold their consciousness to real awareness.

Sir James Mitchell Autobiography provides an intriguing insight into Sir James Mitchell's long and eventful career at the forefront of Caribbean politics. During the 35 years that he was a Member of Parliament of the Grenadines, at the time of retirement Sir James had been the longest serving Prime Minister in the Caribbean, having spent 18 years as the head of government, and the only one to have served from Colonialism through Statehood and Independence. In addition to this, he was the only leader who founded a political party and retired from office after winning four consecutive general elections.

"You can be lonely anywhere, but there is a particular flavor to the loneliness that comes from living in a city, surrounded by thousands of strangers. The Lonely City is a roving cultural history of urban loneliness, centered on the ultimate city: Manhattan, that teeming island of gneiss, concrete, and glass. What does it mean to be lonely? How do we live, if we're not intimately involved with another human being? How do we connect with other people, particularly if our sexuality or physical body is considered deviant or damaged? Does technology draw us closer together or trap us behind screens? Olivia Laing explores these questions by travelling deep into the work and lives of some of the century's most original artists, among them Andy Warhol, David Wojnarowicz, Edward Hopper, Henry Darger and Klaus Nomi. Part memoir, part biography, part dazzling work of cultural criticism, The Lonely City is not just a map, but a celebration of the state of loneliness. It's a voyage out to a strange and sometimes lovely island, adrift from the larger continent of human experience, but visited by many - millions, say - of souls"--

Coverage is complete from the Susquehanna River and Havre de Grace, including the Chesapeake & Delaware Canal, all the way south to Little Choptank River on the Eastern Shore, and Solomons and the Patuxent River on Chesapeake Bay's west shore. All rivers and their tributaries are completely described. Ample GPS coordinates are given. A pocket inside the rear cover contains a 26" x 39" folded chart printed on both sides, showing the entire Upper Bay on a scale useful for laying long courses. There are 12 Tidal Current Charts, one for each hour of a complete diurnal tide cycle. 384 pages, 8 1/2" x 11", 134 charts, diagrams, street maps, and sketches; 125 photos.

Explorer, global green leader, and eco-TV host David de Rothschild recounts the extraordinary journey of the Plastiki, an innovative and mostly untested sixty-foot catamaran that floats on 12,500 reclaimed plastic bottles. It was a voyage that took de Rothschild and a five-person crew 10,000 miles from the U.S. to Australia, sailing through rarely traveled, dangerous waters, risking their lives to call attention to our fragile oceans. Their exploration included urgent study of ocean pollution, island nations threatened by rising seas, damaged coral reefs, and the acidifying ocean itself and their discoveries are a call to action. Packed with exciting narrative, images, maps, journal entries, plans, and sketches, this is the only firsthand account of what may be the most important adventure of our time.

After their 43-foot schooner was stove in by a pod of killer whales, the Robertson family spent 37 days adrift in the Pacific. With no maps, compass, or navigational instruments, and rations for only three days, they used every survival technique they could as they battled 20-foot waves, marauding sharks, thirst, starvation, and exhaustion.

Description of Rio to Polynesia, a classic in nautical adventures Rio to Polynesia is the story of two foolish young lovers who firmly believed that a simple existence surrounded by safety and over-protection against the odds of bustling megalopolis was not worth being lived. They worshiped instead an alternative way of life different from what society expects from each one of us. They thought that if they didn't follow the rules of the establishment, nothing really bad would ever happen to them, no matter how reckless they were. They took for granted that successful outcomes would always crown their achievements no matter how wacky were the means to achieve their endeavours. Roberto was a typical Latin boy from Rio de Janeiro, never wishing to take life too seriously, while Eileen was a British girl brought up to love the sea by her father and dreaming of the beautiful islands in the Pacific. Notwithstanding, either for blind passion, or for lack of fear of the sea, although not liking blustery cold fronts, she decided to go for the most challenging accomplishment of her life, impelled by her strong spirit of adventure, accepting the risks of sailing a twenty-five-foot cruising boat deposed of auxiliary propulsion for a good part of the trip, to take her to the other side of the world in an almost three years long journey. This voyage to the South Seas took place during the last years of the sixties, a time when man was stepping on the moon, while cannibals were still to be found in the most remote parts of the planet. This magic moment in history was the background for this story, and in this aspect, they have been privileged, since several fantastic places they had the chance to visit are unrecognisable nowadays, while many experiences they had witnessed are denied to the ordinary sailor of today, like travelling with empty pockets and making their earnings during the stop-overs, always finding a way to replenish their kitty. Some of the tales they refer to are hard to be believed if they weren't illustrated with photos taken on the occasion. However, a major factor made them change their plans: the birth of their baby in Tahiti. That was the end of their light-hearted dreams, since from then on, the wellbeing of their daughter was above anything else, and it was out of the question to put her life at risk. And that was the end of the Rio to Polynesia story.

"Stark, beautiful and full of imagery." Shadows in the Light is a modern day testimony to the complexity of life and the difficulties we all face. These poems will resonate with experiences of its readers and prove poetry can speak for us all. This is the second collection of poetry by the author Betsy Reavley.

Documents the illicit beginnings of the lucrative telephone monopoly, revealing how Bell's journals acknowledged his illegal copying of Elisha Gray's invention in order to secure what would become the nation's most valuable patent. Reprint. 13,000 first printing.

From the 1870s through 1941, Roton Point Park was one of the preeminent attractions along the shores of Long Island Sound. From its shady picnic grove overlooking the water to its sandy beaches, hotel, dance floor, carousel, roller coaster, and midway rides, Roton Point attracted thousands of visitors each season. Damage from the 1938 hurricane and the start of World War II led to the park's closing in 1941, and Roton Point was divided into two private beach clubs and a public beach. Some of the old buildings remain, including the bathhouse, hotel, and gazebo at Roton Point, and the roller-coaster entry at Bayley Beach.

100 Things to Do in Baltimore Before You Die explores the must-do and must-see parts of Charm City for visitors who have a few minutes or a few days and for those who are visiting for the first time and those who visit regularly. It digs a little deeper for residents who have been here for a decade or an entire lifetime, marking such unusual aspects of the usual as the revolutionary layout of the Contemporary Wing of the BMA that set as much a trend in design as Orioles Park at Camden Yards did for retro designs of baseball stadia. 100 Things to Do in Baltimore Before You Die explores the popularity of snoballs, Rheb's candies, and Natty Boh beer and fuels the continuing debate about where to find the best crab cake and pit beef. There's also a note about the best places to watch Inner Harbor July 4 and New Year's Eve fireworks.

Participation in sailing is declining in America, down more than 40% since 1997 and 70% since 1979. In this provocative book, researcher and avid sailor Nicholas Hayes explains why. The book shows how pressures on free time have increased, and how, in response, many Americans have turned to extremes of spectator or highly structured activities . . . and away from lifelong, family-based, multi-generational recreation. Saving Sailing builds a case for choosing how to spend free time better, using it for quality experiences with families and friends through rewarding pastimes like sailing. The main challenge, the author suggests, is to develop an active system of mentoring, especially between generations. The lessons are broader than sailing, with useful ideas for all parents, for anyone seeking to strengthen the social fabric of American communities, and for those involved in programming for youth and adult activities.

Woodcut landscapes, capture the beauty of the California coastline and accompany a long poem about the region's history and future

To Pioneer the Oceans To Live aboard the Sea To Weather the Storm To Reward Yourself To Get to Know Your Family To Live a Different Kind of Life No Matter What you Earn To Join the Westsail Family Powerful words that brought a new type of cruising sailboat to market in the early 1970s. For years it had been understood that sailboats were more an emotional purchase than a rational one. Yet most companies advertised facts and specifications, presuming that sailboat buyers were knowledgeable enough to translate the specifications into which boat fulfilled their dreams. Westsail made no such presumption and became the first company to put the facts about their boats and the emotional appeal of sailing together in sweet harmony. Boy, did they make a success of the concept. Over 1100 cruising sailboats were delivered in less than ten years.

The digital edition of the RYA Sail Trim Handbook for Cruisers is crammed with useful tips and pointers on one of the fundamentals of good seamanship: sail trim. No matter what anyone tells you, boat cooking IS different from cooking ashore. The space is smaller, there's no grocery store 5 minutes away, you have fewer prepared foods and electric appliances, and food storage is much different. Despite cruising different oceans, we—Jan and Carolyn--both faced the same challenges: eating well while having time to enjoy all the other great aspects of cruising. We love to snorkel, swim, kayak, explore—and just sit and admire the view. We learned with the cookbooks we both had aboard, and wished for information that wasn't available--like when Jan ended up with a frozen chicken complete with head and feet and no instructions on how to cut it up. When we couldn't get foods such as sour cream, English muffins, spaghetti sauce or yogurt, we adapted recipes to make our own. Other times, we experimented with substituting ingredients--maybe the result wasn't identical, but it was still tasty. We ended up with over 150 substitutions and dozens of "make it yourself" options. As we traded recipes and knowledge with each other, we realized we were compiling information that became The Boat Galley Cookbook: 800+ recipes made from readily-obtainable ingredients with hand utensils, including numerous choices to suit every taste: not just one cake but 20, 16 ways to prepare fish, 10 regional barbeque sauces, and so on.
